António Maciel Graça

António Graça is a multi-faceted Portuguese artist and producer, currently based in Lisbon.

He began his musical career in 2015 with the indie-folk project Antony Left, exploring classical textures such as violin, cello, and guitar. After winning a national radio band competition (Antena 3), he released his debut album ‘Influence’ in 2017.

In 2019, the identity LEFT was born, moving towards a sound influenced by electronic music and R&B. His 2021 album ‘Perspective’ surpassed 10 million streams across digital platforms.

In 2024, he released Limbo, a game-album that blurs the line between narrative and interactivity, inviting listeners to make choices. It was selected by BLITZ and Expresso as one of the 50 Best Portuguese Albums of the Year.

Alongside his solo work, he has written and produced music for a wide range of national and international artists, from indie to mainstream pop, including iolanda, Inês Apenas, and Diogo Piçarra.

Deeply connected to collective creation, he co-founded AVALANCHE in 2020 — a project bringing artists together in studio sessions and residencies to experiment, compose, and release music.

The collective released albums Volume I and II in 2022 and 2025, featuring over 50 national artists.

More recently, his main field of experimentation has been the live format. Drawing from his background in music production, theatre, and dance, he creates immersive performances where live-looping, improvisation, and physical presence merge. Whether solo or collaborative, his shows reflect a constant drive for reinvention, connection, and fearless artistic exploration.
